The popularity of these movies often led to copycat murders by susceptible young people (according to psychological studies, about 7-11 percent of the people who see such violence want to copy it, though only a few of them actually go out and do it). The original HALLOWEEN was a bit different, however, from the movies that followed it. It featured an appealing female lead, played by Jamie Lee Curtis (the daughter of Janet Leigh of PSYCHO fame and the original MANCHURIAN CANDIDATE and Tony Curtis of SPARTACUS and SOME LIKE IT HOT), who fought back against the monster. It also featured a heroic psychiatrist (played by Donald Pleasance) who talked about the reality of evil in the world. Finally, the original movie features a pulse-pounding score by Director John Carpenter that perfectly accentuated the girl and the psychiatrist's fight against the monster. Sadly, though, a lot of mediocre sequels followed the original movie. Forty years later, Producers John Carpenter and Jamie Lee Curtis have teamed up with Director (and co-writer) David Gordon Green to revisit the story of the mad killer Michael Myers. In this new HALLOWEEN movie, Michael Myers is now a grown-up, married man, and he has been in the maximum-security insane asylum where he's been held for years. They've brought the mask Michael used during his killing spree forty years ago to try to get him to talk, but Michael refuses to say a word, as he has for 40 years. That night, Michael is scheduled to be transported along with other prisoners to another facility, where he'll more be studied to find out what makes him tick. Of course, his current doctor, a man named Sartain, is against the move. Dr. Sartain is still obsessed with trying to unlock the key to Michael's behavior. The British reporters travel to Haddonfield, Illinois, the city of Michael's first attacks in 1963 as a boy and in 1978 after his first escape. They've come to visit Laurie Strode, the sole survivor of Michael's killing spree in 1978. Laurie agrees to talk to them for the $3,000 they've brought with them, but they get little for their money. After they leave, Laurie practices shooting some dummies in the woods behind her house. Inside her house, she visits a basement room hidden under the island in her kitchen. Laurie is estranged from her daughter, Karen, who was taken from Laurie when she was 12 by the authorities because of Laurie's single-minded obsession with Michael. Now married with a teenage daughter of her own, Karen wants nothing to do with Laurie. Michael Myers is still alive, and he's waiting for his opportunity to kill Laurie. He runs into the two British reporters at a gas station, brutally kills them and takes back his mask. The stage is set for a final showdown between Michael, Laurie and Laurie's family. The new HALLOWEEN (2018) is the best-made, most intense of the HALLOWEEN sequels since the original 1978 movie. It has some entertaining twists as the female heroine defends herself and her family against a purely evil killer. She wants to bring an end to Michael's ultraviolent, wicked killing sprees. That said, the villain's murderous behavior is likely to attract more susceptible teenagers wanting to copy such violence. The new movie also contains lots of strong foul language and a couple marijuana references elements concerned a woman trying to protect her family from an evil force. Also, despite the heroine's reference to prayer; ultimately, she resorts to her own devices, strength and wit to defeat the villain. Halloween (I) (2018) Add to guide Jump to: Severity? 2 9 34 179 We were unable to submit your evaluation. Please try again later. Some of the deaths can be quite gruesome, others happen off screen quite a bit leaving the violence to your imagination. Most of the scenes involving Michael wearing his mask can have some very effective jump scares. Many of them involving darkness and shadows. Can be quite frightening. A killer hides in a room full of practice shooting dummies. A woman enters the room and checks certain areas which builds up suspense for the audience. The killer then jumps out. This is a MAJOR jump scare Most of the deaths happen off screen. We do, however, hear them happen and briefly see the bloody aftermath. Much darker than the previous films. One of the reasons is that the protagonist, Laurie Strode, is seen suffering from severe PTSD, due to the horrific trauma she had to endure when facing Michael Myers in all her life, and this is all depicted accurately. Also, the movie has a very dark and eerie atmosphere, and it mostly relies on psychological horror instead of using an overuse of jumpscares and gore in order to keep the audiences thrilled and on the very edge of their seats. Not as violent and brutal as the Rob Zombie remakes, but still very intense. Not quite as terrifying as the 1978 original, but still very scary. MA15+(Strong Violence & Horror Themes) The Parents Guide items below may give away important plot points. A woman in a bathroom stall sees bloody teeth dropped in with her At the film's climax, Michael Myers (The Shape) is left to be burnt alive. We DO NOT see his body. The most graphic scene in the film is when Michael steps on a man's head and it is stomped, with blood and brain matter presented although this is very brief. The character of Dave the boyfriend of the babysitter Vicky is killed offscreen we later see him pinned to the wall with the butcher knife he grabbed to help her through his throat the knife is whats holding him to the wall lots of blood. Laurie uses a shotgun to stop Myers choking her, blowing some of Myers' fingers off in the process-quite graphic but not overly so or bloody. Michael Myers gets shot in the shoulder by Laurie and big bloodshot is exposed. Also, Michael gets shot in the face by Karen After a particularly gruesome murder offscreen, we hear a baby crying. Michael approaches the crib but thankfully does not harm the baby. This is one of the most tense parts of the movie. January 25, 2021 This is a brilliant movie! The best in the series in my opinion. Very well made. Not scary at all! It wasnt overly gory; there was a gruesome scene where michael stamps on someones head and there is a pile of gore. But there are infrequent kills with a blood spatter every now and then. Some kills literally have no gore. There were a few dead bodies with little injury detail. The language wasnt that bad, occasional Fk and MotherFker. It was brilliant! BBFC has rated it 18 for strong bloody violence and gore but it doesnt deserve this. I'd say this movie isn't as good as Silence of the lambs or wrong turn but it was amazing. This title has: 1 person found this helpful, January 20, 2021 A fantastic sequel to the original, incredibly violent, and a great horror experience for 16 and older. So if your kid watched the original then let them watch. This title has: Too much drinking/drugs/smoking October 8, 2020 This was an amazing sequel, and if your kid has seen the original then don't hold them back from this movie. If you are worried about language, drinking or slasher movie violence then don't let them watch. Otherwise, great movie for 11 and up.(Also Laurie is a great role model) This title has: Too much drinking/drugs/smoking May 8, 2020 This title has: April 13, 2020 this movie has a lot of horror then blood. Michael myers is amazing as ever. and this movie really shows you the true side of him: he kills for no reason, he has no reason to kill, and I really suggest this movie for kids who want to start watching horror. This title has: Too much drinking/drugs/smoking January 8, 2020 I mean this movie is fun and scary not really great, but it's solid. So when you hear the title don't think of the other sequels think of a fun fresh movie. But there is no ignoring that it's violent. And the characters don't hold back on language. And it could scare a young child. So basically watch out for violence and language and don't take your kids to see it for known reasons. This title has:
